NEW QUESTION: 4A company wants to use Amazon ECS to provide a Docker container runtime environment.For compliance reasons, all Amazon EBS volumes used in the ECS cluster must be encrypted.Rolling updates will be made to the cluster instances and the company wants the instances drained of all tasks before being terminated.How can these requirements be met? (Select TWO.)A. Create an Auto Scaling lifecycle hook backed by an AWS Lambda function that uses the AWS SDK to mark a terminating instance as DRAINING. Prevent the lifecycle hook from completing until the running tasks on the instance are zero.B. Copy the default AWS CloudFormation template that ECS uses to deploy cluster instances.Modify the template resource EBS configuration setting to set `Encrypted: True` and include the AWS KMS alias: `aws/ebs` to encrypt the AMI.C. Modify the default ECS AMI user data to create a script that executes `docker rm -f {id}` for all running container instances. Copy the script to the `/etc/init.d/rc.d` directory and execute `chconfig` enabling the script to run during operating system shutdown.D. Create an IAM role that allows the action `ECS::EncryptedImage`. Configure the AWS CLI and a profile to use this role. Start the cluster using the AWS CLI providing the `--use-encrypted-image` and `--kms-key` arguments to the `create-cluster` ECS command.E. Use AWS CodePipeline to build a pipeline that discovers the latest Amazon-provided ECS AMI, then copies the image to an encrypted AMI outputting the encrypted AMI ID. This is a docker level config - nope.B. Way too much engineering for an encrypted image.C. Explanation.C1. If you launch an ECS cluster in console, you get 3 templates to choose Alias is accurate.C4. Option C is valid.D. This is standard valid behaviour. Different ways to do things, this method is valid. They intentionally used the 'the AWS SDK' to bring doubts into how you do this. Cover the text to layman tems: AWS SDK = in Lambda use something like python to make a call to AWS to put the instance in draining mode.D response is valid.E. ECS::EncryptedImage does not exist. No AWS CLI for the --use-encrypted either. Nope.Final answer.C and D.(Try actually deploying a 2 node cluster on T2 micro instances and play around - see what happens and look at the cloudformation templatelater (EC2+Linux template).
