NEW QUESTION: 2 Which type of server is used to deliver the configuration to an IP phone?
A. Cisco Discovery Protocol
B. DHCP
C. TFTP
D. FTP
Answer: C
Explanation: Explanation
Explanation/Reference: Cisco TFTP
The Cisco TFTP service builds and serves files consistent with the trivial file transfer protocol, which is a simplified version of the File Transfer Protocol (FTP). Cisco TFTP builds configuration files and serves embedded component executables, ringer files, and device configuration files. A configuration file contains a prioritized list of Cisco CallManagers for a device (telephones and gateways), the TCP port on which the device connects to those Cisco CallManagers, and an executable load identifier. Configuration files for Cisco IP Phone 7960 and 7940 models also contain URLs for the phone buttons: messages, directories, services, and information. Configuration files for gateways contain all their configuration information. Configuration files may be in a .cnf format or a .cnf.xml format, depending on the device type and your TFTP service parameter settings. When you set the BuildCNFFlag service parameter to True, the TFTP server builds both .cnf.xml and .cnf format configuration files for devices. When you set the parameter to False, the TFTP server builds only .cnf.xml files for devices.

The all-node group is used to communicate with all interfaces on the local link, and the solicited-nodes multicast group is required for link-layer address resolution. Routers also join a third multicast group, the all-routers group (FF02::2).
