NEW QUESTION: 3You have been asked to design a NAT solution for your company's VPC-based web application. Traffic from the private subnets varies throughout the day from 500 Mbps to spikes of 7 Gbps. What is the most cost-effective and scalable solution?A. Create an Auto Scaling group of Amazon EC2 NAT instances in a public subnet; route all private subnet Internet traffic through the NAT gatewayB. Create an Amazon EC2 NAT instance with a second elastic network (ENI) in a public subnet; route all private subnet Internet traffic through the NAT gateway.C. Create a NAT gateway in a public subnet; route all private subnet Internet Traffic through the NAT gatewayD. Move the Internet gateway for the VPC to a public subnet; route all Internet traffic through the Internet gatewayAnswer: CExplanation:ExplanationGetting Started Let's try to see how we can create and configure an AWS NAT Gateway:* Login to the AWS console, select VPC service and click on NAT Gateways as shown below:Managed NAT gateway - dashboard* Provide the necessary details, like subnet and Elastic IP, and create the NAT Gateway. You need to select the subnet which you want to be private subnet and your Elastic IP so that it can communicate to Internet.NAT Gateway - create* Once created you will see this:NAT Gateway - success* Once the NAT Gateway is created you can edit your routing table to send traffic destined for the Internet toward the gateway. The gateway's internal address will be chosen automatically, and will be in the* same subnet as the gateway.Once the NAT Gateway is configured, you are all set. Your private subnet instances should now be able to communicate with the Internet without much management, monitoring, and configuration overhead.Sample NAT Gateway architecture: NAT Gateway - designMigrating from an existing NAT instanceIf you are already using a NAT instance in your VPC setup, it's time to migrate now, and I can tell you that it's not tough. You only need to make sure that you create the NAT Gateway in the same subnet as your existing NAT instance. Then you need to edit the route table by replacing the existing NAT reference with the internal address of the new gateway. I told you this was very straightforward. You will need to ensure that you don't have any critical tasks running at the time of migration, because changing a route from a NAT instance to the gateway can result in a dropped connection.This feature was only very recently introduced by AWS, so it's definitely worth sharing. It can resolve lots of existing concerns. Do you have your own experience with this new feature? Why not share it with others.
