Your network contains a System Center 2012 Configuration Manager environment that contains six servers configured as shown in the following table. Server5 and Server6 are in the perimeter network, while Server1, Server2, Server3, and Server4 are in the internal network. You plan to deploy servers to the perimeter network by using Configuration Manager. The operating system for each server will be instated over the network. The installations will begin automatically, as soon as each server starts for the first time. You need to recommend a solution to minimize the amount of network traffic between the perimeter network and the internal network during the installation of the operating systems. What should you do? A. Install a PXE-enabled protected distribution point on Server6. B. Install an enrollment proxy point on Server6. C. Install the Windows Cluster service on Server3. D. Configure IIS to support only HTTPS on Server5. E. Configure the Exchange connector on Server3. F. Install Windows Server Update Services (WSUS) on Server3. G. Install a software update point on Server3. H. Install Network Load Balancing (NLB) on Server6. I. Install a management point on Servers. J. Install a PXE-enabled protected distribution point on Server4. K. Install a protected distribution point on Server1. L. Install the Windows Cluster service on Server6. M. Install Network Load Balancing (NLB) on Server3. N. Configure IIS to support only HTTP on Server3. O. Install a management point on Server2. Answer: A Explanation: Explanation/Reference: A protected distribution point will limit deployment to a predefined boundary. (the perimeter network) With PXE enabled the servers will be installed when they boot.
