NEW QUESTION: 1 The my.cnf file contains the following entries: innodb_data_home_dir = innodb_data_file_path = /ibdata/ibdata1:50M;/disk2/ibdata2:50M:autoextend Which of the following statements are true?
A. The total minimum size of the InnoDB data files is 100MB.
B. The initial size of the InnoDB data files on server startup will be set to 50MB. If more space is needed, another 50MB will be allocated.
C. There are two InnoDB data files.
D. There are three InnoDB data files.
E. The total maximum size of the InnoDB data files is 100MB.
F. The data files will be stored below the default data directory.
Answer: A,C
Explanation: 29.4.7.1 Configuring the InnoDB Tablespace
A tablespace consisting of a single 100MB file named innodata1 located in the data directory:
[mysqld]innodb_data_file_path = innodata1:100M
It's unnecessary to specify a value for the innodb_data_home_dir option in this case because the data directory is its default value.
A tablespace like that in the previous example, except that the file is auto-extending:
[mysqld]innodb_data_file_path = innodata1:100M:autoextend
A tablespace like that in the previous example, but with a limit of 500MB on the size to which the auto-extending file may grow:
[mysqld]innodb_data_file_path = innodata1:100M:autoextend:max:500M

NEW QUESTION: 2 A phone is configured with an ephone-dn number of A100. Which CLI command is used in ephone-dn configuration mode to enable the Intercom feature to dial this phone?
A. intercom extension A100
B. intercom A100 enable
C. intercom A100
D. intercom number A100
Answer: C
Explanation: Configuring Intercom
Intercom configurations are common in traditional phone systems. This feature allows an administrative assistant and executive to work closely together by having a speakerphone "tether" between them.
Figure 7-15 Configuring Call Pickup Groups in CCPTechnically, the way intercom deployments work is through a speed-dial and auto-answer speed-dial configuration. If the administrative assistant presses the button configured as an intercom, it speed dials the executive's phone, which auto-answers the call on muted speakerphone. To establish two-way communication, the executive deactivates mute (by pressing the Mute button). Understanding this helps make the intercom configuration much clearer.
To configure intercom functionality, you must configure two new ephone-dns, one for each side of the intercom connection. These intercom lines should be assigned a number, just like any other ephone-dn. However, to prevent others from accidentally (or purposely) dialing the intercom and ending up on muted speakerphone for a random IP phone, the number should be something users cannot dial from other IP phones.
The configuration in Example 7-8 Configuring Intercom
CME_Voice(config)# ephone-dn 60
CME_Voice(config-ephone-dn)# number A100
CME_Voice(config-ephone-dn)# intercom A101
label "Manager"
CME_Voice(config-ephone-dn)# exit
CME_Voice(config)# ephone-dn 61
CME_Voice(config-ephone-dn)# number A101
CME_Voice(config-ephone-dn)# intercom A100
label "Assistant"
CME_Voice(config-ephone-dn)# exit
CME_Voice(config)# ephone 1
CME_Voice(config-ephone)# button 2:60
CME_Voice(config-ephone)# restart restarting 0014.1C48.E71A
CME_Voice(config-ephone)# exit
CME_Voice(config)# ephone 2
CME_Voice(config-ephone)# button 2:61
CME_Voice(config-ephone)# restart restarting 0019.D122.
Notice the number assigned to ephone-dn 60 is A100. You cannot dial this number from a Cisco IP Phone keypad, but you can assign it to a speed-dial button. The intercom command acts like a speed-dial button on the ephone-dn. In the case of ephone-dn 60, the command intercom A101 dials the number A101, which is assigned to ephone-dn 61. Because ephone-dn 61 is also configured with the intercom command, it auto-answers the incoming call on muted speakerphone. The label syntax allows you to assign a logical name to the speed-dial; otherwise, the A101 or A100 label will show up next to the line button on the phone. There are three other arguments you can use with the intercom command to tune the functionality:
*barge-in: Automatically places an existing call on hold and causes the intercom to immediately answer.
*no-auto-answer: Causes the phone to ring rather than auto-answer on speakerphone.
*no-mute: Causes the intercom to answer with unmuted speakerphone rather than muted. Although this is beneficial to allow immediate two-way conversation, you run the risk of one side barging into existing conversations or background noise. CCP can also configure Intercom functionality. To do this, navigate to Unified Communications > Telephony Features > Intercom and click the Create button. The configuration window shown in Figure 7-16 allows you to select the user and speed-dial button you want to assign Intercom functionality. Figure 7-16 Configuring Intercom in CCP After you click the Deliver button, CCP applies the following syntax to the router. Notice that CCP also uses alpha-numeric speed dials to prevent other users from accessing the intercom functionality inadvertently: ephone-dn 5 number A105002 description Intercom intercom A105102 label "Intercom Paul" exit ephone-dn 4 number A105102 description Intercom intercom A105002 label "Intercom John" exit ephone-dn 5 name "" exit ephone 2 button 2:5 restart exit ephone-dn 4 name "" exit ephone 3 button 2:4 restart exit
