NEW QUESTION: 1 Which statement about DTP is true?
A. It uses the native VLAN.
B. It negotiates a trunk link after VTP has been configured.
C. It sends data on VLAN 1.
D. It uses desirable mode by default.
Answer: C
Explanation: Disabling Dynamic Trunking Protocol (DTP) Cisco's Dynamic Trunking Protocol can facilitate the automatic creation of trunks between two switches. When two connected ports are configured in dynamic mode, and at least one of the ports is configured as desirable, the two switches will negotiate the formation of a trunk across the link. DTP isn't to be confused with VLAN Trunking Protocol (VTP), although the VTP domain does come into play. DTP on the wire is pretty simple, essentially only advertising the VTP domain, the status of the interface, and it's DTP type. These packets are transmitted in the native (or access) VLAN every 60 seconds both natively and with ISL encapsulation (tagged as VLAN 1) when DTP is enabled.

NEW QUESTION: 2 What is the purpose of the UPDATE NODE <nodename> BKREPLRULEDEFAULT=<new rule name> server command?
A. update the node settings by changing the default replication rule for archiving data
B. update the node settings by changing both the default replication rule for backing up and archiving data
C. update the node settings by changing the default replication rule for backing up data
D. update the node settings by changing the default replication rule for Space Management data
Answer: C
Explanation/Reference: BKREPLRule default specifies the replication rule for backup data. ARREPLRule default specifies the replication rule for archive data. SPREPLRule default specifies the replication rule for space-managed data. References: IBM Spectrum Protect for Windows Version 8.1.0, Administrator's Reference, p 1091
