NEW QUESTION: 2CORRECT TEXTWhich are the type of actions that can be specified for an approval process?Answer: Explanation:InitialSubmission Actions, Final Approval Actions, Final Rejection Actions, Recall Actions, Approval Actions and Rejection Actions for each step in the approval process.

NEW QUESTION: 3You are a network technician with many years' experience. Many users complain that they can hear echo when their calls go out an H.323 gateway. You have made some testing for the gateway and have changed the configuration. So the ERL level turns to be 6 dB. Furthermore, the echo-cancel coverage value is raised to 64 ms. Please choose the effect on the voice qualityafter this modification.A. The increase in echo-cancel coverage will have no effect on voice quality.B. Consonants will be chopped by the echo canceller.C. The echo canceller will take 2-3 seconds longer to converge at the beginning of the call.D. The ends of sentences will be chopped by the echo canceller.Answer: CExplanation:echo-cancel coveragecommand Adjusts the coverage size of the echo canceller. This command enables cancellation of voice that is sent out through the interface and received back on the same interface within the configured amount of time. If the local loop(the distance from the interface to the connected equipment that is producing the echo) is longer, the configured value of this command should be extended. If you configure a longer value for this command, it takes the echo canceller longer to converge. In this case, the user might hear a slight echo when the connection is initially set up. If the configured value for this command is too short, the user might hear some echo for the duration of the call because the echo canceller is not canceling the longer-delay echoes. There is no echo or echo cancellation on the network side (for example, the non-POTS side of the connection).
