NEW QUESTION: 1 Refer to Exhibit: Which type of replication is represented in the exhibit? A. Triangle/multitarget, synchronous + disk buffered B. Cascade/multihop, synchronous + asynchronous C. Triangle/multitarget, synchronous + differential resync D. Cascade/multihop, synchronous + disk buffered Answer: D
Explanation: Three-site Replication: Cascade/Multihop (Synchronous + Disk Buffered) In the cascade/multihop three-site replication, data flows from the source to the intermediate storage array, known as a bunker, in the first hop, and then, from a bunker to a storage array at a remote site in the second hop. Replication can be performed in two ways, synchronous+ disk-buffered or synchronous + asynchronous. Synchronous + Disk Buffered: This method employs a combination of local and remote replication technologies. Synchronous replication occurs between the source and the bunker; a consistent PIT local replica is created at the bunker. Data is transmitted from the local replica at the bunker to the remote replica at the remote site. Optionally, a local replica can be created at the remote site after data is received from the bunker. In this method, a minimum of 4 storage volumes are required (including the source) to replicate one storage device. RPO at the remote site is usually in the order of hours for this implementation.
