NEW QUESTION: 3Which two of the following can be performed directly with the IBM Cloud Functions CLI plug-in? (Select two.)A. Encrypt code associated with an action.B. Create package bindings.C. List entities in a package.D. Add ACL to a package.E. SSH into the server running an action.Answer: B,CExplanation:ExplanationExplanationB: Although you can use the entities in a package directly, you might find yourself passing the same parameters to the action every time. You can simplify the process by binding to a package and specifying default parameters, which are inherited by the actions in the package.Example: Bind to the /whisk.system/samples package and set a default place parameter value.wsk package bind /whisk.system/samples valhallaSamples --param place Valhalla ok: created binding valhallaSamples C: Several packages are registered with Cloud Functions. You can get a list of packages in a namespace, list the entities in a package, and get a description of the individual entities in a package.Example: Get a list of packages in the /whisk.system namespace.wsk package list /whisk.systemNote: Using the Cloud Functions CLIOnce the environment is configured, you can use the Cloud Functions CLI to perform the following tasks:Run your code snippets, or actions, on Cloud FunctionsUse triggers and rules to enable your actions to respond to events.Learn how packages bundle actions and configure external events sources. Explore the catalog of packages and enhance your applications with external services, such as a Cloudfant event source.References:
