NEW QUESTION: 1When an organization is implementing an information security governance program, its board of directors should be responsible for:A. setting the strategic direction of the program.B. auditing for compliance.C. reviewing training and awareness programs.D. drafting information security policies.Answer: A*Explanation:Explanation/Reference:Explanation:A board of directors should establish the strategic direction of the program to ensure that it is in sync with the company's vision and business goals. The board must incorporate the governance program into the overall corporate business strategy. Drafting information security policies is best fulfilled by someone such as a security manager with the expertise to bring balance, scope and focus to the policies. Reviewing training and awareness programs may best be handled by security management and training staff to ensure that the training is on point and follows best practices. Auditing for compliance is best left to the internal and external auditors to provide an objective review of the program and how it meets regulatory and statutory compliance.

It ensures that health information data is protected. Before HIPAA, personal medical information was often available to anyone. Security to protect the data was lax, and the data was often misused.If your organization handles health information, HIPAA applies. HIPAA defines health information as any data that is created or received by health care providers, health plans, public health authorities, employers, life insurers, schools or universities, and health care clearinghouses. HIPAA defines any data that is related to the health of an individual, including past/present/future health, physical/mental health, and past/present/future payments for health care. Creating a HIPAA compliance plan involves following phases: Assessment: An assessment helps in identifying whether organization is covered by HIPAA. If it is, then further requirement is to identify what data is needed to protect. Risk analysis: A risk analysis helps to identify the risks. In this phase, analyzing method of handling data of organization is done. Plan creation: After identifying the risks, plan is created. This plan includes methods to reduce the risk. Plan implementation: In this plan is being implemented. Continuous monitoring: Security in depth requires continuous monitoring. Monitor regulations for changes. Monitor risks for changes. Monitor the plan to ensure it is still used. Assessment: Regular reviews are conducted to ensure that the organization remains in compliance. Incorrect Answers: A: GLBA is not used for handling health care information. C: SOX designed to hold executives and board members personally responsible for financial data. D: FISMA ensures protection of data of federal agencies.
