NEW QUESTION: 1What are two methods that can be used to denormalize tables in BigQuery?

A. 1) Use nested repeated fields; 2) Use a partitioned table
B. 1) Use a partitioned table; 2) Join tables into one table
C. 1) Split table into multiple tables; 2) Use a partitioned table
D. 1) Join tables into one table; 2) Use nested repeated fields

Answer: D
Explanation:The conventional method of denormalizing data involves simply writing a fact, along with all its dimensions, into a flat table structure. For example, if you are dealing with sales transactions, you would write each individual fact to a record, along with the accompanying dimensions such as order and customer information. The other method for denormalizing data takes advantage of BigQuery's native support for nested and repeated structures in JSON or Avro input data. Expressing records using nested and repeated structures can provide a more natural representation of the underlying data. In the case of the sales order, the outer part of a JSON structure would contain the order and customer information, and the inner part of the structure would contain the individual line items of the order, which would be represented as nested, repeated elements.

NEW QUESTION: 2A. Option D
B. Option A
C. Option B
D. Option C
Answer: D
Explanation:The Set-DnsServerForwarder cmdlet changes forwarder settings on a Domain Name System (DNS) server. This cmdlet sets or resets IP addresses to which the DNS server forwards DNS queries when it cannot solve them locally. This cmdlet overwrites existing server level forwarders. Setting IP addresses by using this cmdlet causes the DNS server to perform recursive queries to the DNS servers at the specified IP addresses. By default, the DNS server waits five seconds for a response from one forwarder IP address before it tries another forwarder IP address
