NEW QUESTION: 4Which statement best describes the reason why the Oracle Reference Architecture defines both a Service Contract and a Usage Agreement?A. The Usage Agreement is a reusable portion of the Service Contract that can be shared by other Service Contracts.B. The Usage Agreement defines how to use the SOA Service. The Service Contract defines the functionality provided by the SOA Service.C. Defining both Usage Agreement and Service Contract provides a decoupling between service consumers and service providers.D. The Service Contract is the reusable portion of the Usage Agreement that can be shared by other Usage Agreements.E. The Service Contract defines the technical specifics of the SOA Service. The Usage Agreement defines the business aspects of the SOA Service.Answer: C*Explanation: The usage agreement is not part of the Service; rather it defines what a particular service consumer is entitled to consume from the Service. Having both a usage agreement and a service contract provides a decoupling between the service provider and service consumer. This not only facilitates reuse but also provides a separation of concerns. The service contract defines the totality of what the Service guarantees to provide, and can be written and validated independent of any knowledge of specific service consumers. The usage agreement is service consumer specific and defines what capabilities of the Service each consumer is allowed to consume.Reference: Oracle Reference Architecture, SOA Foundation, Release 3.1
