NEW QUESTION: 1 Which of the following are methods EIGRP uses to initially populate (seed) its EIGRP topology table, before learning topology data from neighbors? (Choose two.)
A. By adding the subnets of working interfaces over which static neighbors have been defined
B. By adding all subnets listed by the show ip route static command
C. By adding all subnets listed by the show ip route connected command
D. By adding subnets redistributed on the local router from another routing source
Answer: A, D
Explanation: Explanation/Reference: Explanation: Other than the two listed correct answers, the local router also adds connected routes for which the network command matches the corresponding interfaces, so it may not add all connected routes. Also, EIGRP does not add static routes to the EIGRP topology table, unless those routes are redistributed.
