NEW QUESTION: 1Contoso. Ltd. has Microsoft SQL Server databases that support a custom application. The current SQL Server environment consists of two servers: ContosoSQL1 and ComosoSQL2. These two servers participate in an Always On Availability Group named ContosoAG1 that is configured to use synchronous-commit with automatic failover. The secondary replica is not configured for read-only access. The application performs both transactional processing and historical data retrieval in a database named ContosoDB. The application includes an inventory management module. The inventory management module and database have experienced performance issues. Users report mat a Query named inventoryQuery1 takes a long time to complete. The query is shown as follows:SELECT ProductNumber, Name, ProductLineFROM Production.ProductWHERE ProductNumber = N'The query plan used by SQL Server for this query is shown in the exhibit. Various Performance issues, including frequent long-term blocking episodes, prevent business users from completing their daily tasks. You suspect the tempdb database resources could be responsible. You must create blocking reports for the contosoDB database to identify issues. You plan to use Extended Events to review all Transact SQL statements that are run against the ContosoSQL1 instance. The output from the Extended Events session must contain both start and stop events and must be written to a file. You must configure the Extended Events session to minimize possible data loss and reduce the effect on server performance. You plan to deploy an additional secondary replica named contosoSQL3 to ContosoAG1. Ready-only traffic must be load-balanced between the two secondary replicas, regardless of which instance is the primary replica. Contoso plans to add an additional dedicated reporting system that will reply on real-time data from the transactional database. The company plans to improve their high availability/disaster recovery (HA/DR) solution. As part of the planned improvements, you will back up all databases from ContosoSQL1 directory to an off-site location. You need to troubleshoot and resolve the issue with InventoryQuery1. Use the drop down menus to select the answer choice that answers each question based on the information presented in the graphic.Answer: Explanation:Explanation

NEW QUESTION: 2An organization currently using tape backups takes one full backup weekly and incremental backups daily. They recently augmented their tape backup procedures with a backup-to-disk solution. This is appropriate because:A. tape libraries are no longer needed.B. data storage on disks is more reliable than on tapes.C. backup to disk is always significantly faster than backup to tape.D. fast synthetic backups for offsite storage are supported.Answer:

DExplanation:Explanation/Reference:Explanation:Disk-to-disk (D2D) backup should not be seen as a direct replacement for backup to tape; rather, it should be viewed as part of a multitiered backup architecture that takes advantage of the best features of both tape and disk technologies. Backups to disks are not dramatically faster than backups to tapes in a balanced environment. Most often than not there is hardly a difference, since the limiting components are not tape or disk drives but the overall sustained bandwidth of the backup server's backplane. The advantage in terms of speed is in restoring performance, since all data are on hand and can be accessed randomly, resulting in a dramatic enhancement in throughput. This makes fast synthetic backups (making a full backup without touching the host's data only by using the existing incremental backups) efficient and easy. Although the cost of disks has been reduced, tape-based backup can offer an overall cost advantage over disk-only solutions. Even if RAID arrays are used for D2D storage, a failed drive must be swapped out and the RAID set rebuilt before another disk drive fails, thus making this kind of backup more risky and not suitable as a solution of last resort. In contrast, a single tape drive failure does not produce any data loss since the data resides on the tape media. In a multidrive library, the loss of the use of a single tape drive has no impact on the overall level of data protection. Conversely, the loss of a disk drive in an array can put all data at ri
