NEW QUESTION: 2You have a computer that runs Windows 7.You need to configure an application to connect to the computer by using the IPV6 loopback address.Which address should you specify?A. fe80::f56f:56cb:a136:4184B. ::1C. 127.0.0.1D. 12::1Answer: B
Explanation:
Loopback addressThe loopback address (0:0:0:0:0:0:1 or ::1) is used to identify a loopback interface, enabling a node to send packets to itself. It is equivalent to the IPv4 loopback address of 127.0.0.1. Packets addressed to the loopback address must never be sent on a link or forwarded by a router.Link-LocalLink-local addresses always begin with FE80. With the 64-bit interface identifier, the prefix for link-local addresses is always FE80::/64. An IPv6 router never forwards link-local traffic beyond the link.Nodes use link-local addresses when communicating with neighboring nodes on the same link. For example, on a single-link IPv6 network with no router, hosts use link-local addresses to communicate with other hosts on the link. Link-local addresses are equivalent to Automatic Private IP Addressing (APIPA) IPv4 addresses autoconfigured on computers that are running Windows. APIPA addresses use the 169.254.0.0/16 prefix. The scope of a link-local address is the local link.A link-local address is required for Neighbor Discovery processes and is always automatically configured, even in the absence of all other unicast addresses.
