NEW QUESTION: 1 A Solutions Architect is designing an API that will use Amazon API Gateway, which is backed by AWS Lambda. The Lambda function is not running inside a VPC and will query Amazon DynamoDB to get the results. The user will include the ItemId request parameter in the URL query string as the key to retrieve the data. The Solutions Architect analysed the traffic pattern and has noticed that customers are sending repeated queries to get the same information. The Solution Architect wants to implement a caching to reduce the load on the database and improve query latency. What should the Solution Architect do to implement a caching solution?
A. In Amazon ElastiCache, store previously retrieved requests and query the cluster before querying the database.
B. In Lambda, use /tmp as the cache directory to store previously retrieved requests.
C. In API Gateway, enable caching based on the item id query parameter.
D. In API Gateway, add an additional Cache-Control: only-if-cached header before sending the request to Lambda.
