NEW QUESTION: 1What does a traffic table enable you to do?A. Determine the number of available lines.B. Determine the number of connections made over a period of time.C. Determine the number of necessary lines.D. Determine the number of customers served.

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION: 2Observe the diagram.RTC is the hub router and RTA and RTB are the spokes. There are no virtual circuits between the spoke locations. What is needed to successfully route traffic to the 11.11.11.0/24 network from RTA?A. The neighbor 10.10.10.1 next-hop-self command on RTC.B. Nothing is required. This is the default behavior on this topology.C. The neighbor 10.10.10.1 next-hop-self command on RTB.D. The neighbor 10.10.10.1 next-hop-self command on RTA.Answer: A*Explanation:The following example illustrates the issue: BGP Next Hop (NBMA)If the common media as you see in the shaded area above is a frame relay or any NBMA cloud then the exact behavior will occur as if we were connected via Ethernet. RTC will advertise 180.20.0.0 to RTA with a next hop of 170.10.20.3. The problem is that RTA does not have a direct PVC to RTD, and cannot reach the next hop. In this case routing will fail. In order to remedy this situation a command called next-hop-self is created. The next-hop-self Command Because of certain situations with the next hop as we saw in the previous example, a command called next-hop-self is created. The syntax is: neighbor {ip-address|peer-group-name} next-hop-self The next-hop-self command allows us to force BGP to use a specified IP address as the next hop rather than letting the protocol choose the next hop. In the previous example, the following configuration solves our problem: RTC# router bgp 300 neighbor 170.10.20.1 remote-as 100 neighbor 170.10.20.1 next-hop-self RTC advertises 180.20.0.0 with a next hop = 170.10.20.2Reference: <http://www.cisco.com/warp/public/459/bgp-toc.html#bgpnexthop>

NEW QUESTION: 3When discussing with customers how they can transform to a hybrid infrastructure, how should you use HPE's position in the market?A. Guarantee a successful cloud infrastructure deployment based on HPE's status as the only leader in the cloud management platform marketB. Emphasize the leading HPE anti-malware solutions that help customers secure their data in the public cloud.C. Showcase HPE's proven track record as number one provider of cloud infrastructure worldwide.D. Highlight HPE experience in delivering software as a service (SaaS) services for small to medium businesses (SMBs).Answer: C
