NEW QUESTION: 2Your network contains a DNS server that runs Windows Server 2008 R2 Service Pack 1 (SP1).You need to enable cache locking on the DNS server.Which tool should you use?(Each correct answer presents a complete solution.Choose two.)A. DnscmdB. DNS ManagerC. Server ManagerD. RegeditE. NetshF. DnsAnswer: A,DEExplanation:

Explanation/Reference:dnscmd /Config /CacheLockingPercent <percent> To configure cache locking using the Windows interfaceClick Start, click Run, type regedit.exe, and then press ENTER.In Registry Editor, open HKEY_LOCAL_MACHINESYSTEMCurrentControlSetsservicesDNSParameters.If the CacheLockingPercent registry key is not present, right-click Parameters, click New, click DWORD (32-bit) Value, and then type CacheLockingPercent for the name of the new registry key.Double-click the CacheLockingPercent registry key.Under Base, choose Decimal, under Value data type a value from 0 to 100 for the cache locking percent, and then click OK.Close Registry Editor.Restart the DNS Server service.Cache locking is a new security feature available with Windows Server@ 2008 R2 that allows you to control whether or not information in the DNS cache can be overwritten. When a recursive DNS server responds to a query, it will cache the results obtained so that it can respond quickly if it receives another query requesting the same information. The period of time the DNS server will keep information in its cache is determined by the Time to Live (TTL) value for a resource record. Until the TTL period expires, information in the cache might be overwritten if updated information about that resource record is received. If an attacker successfully overwrites information in the cache, they might be able to redirect traffic on your network to a malicious site.Cache locking is configured as a percent value. For example, if the cache locking value is set to 50, then the DNS server will not overwrite a cached entry for half of the duration of the TTL. By default, the cache locking percent value is 100. This means that cached entries will not be overwritten for the entire duration of the TTL. The cache locking value is stored in the CacheLockingPercent registry key. If the registry key is not present, then the DNS server will use the default cache locking value of 100.<http://technet.microsoft.com/nl-nl/library/ee649148%28WS.10%29.aspx>
