NEW QUESTION: 1A. Option BB. Option DC. Option AD. Option C
Answer: C
Explanation: Smart cards contain a microcomputer and a small amount of memory, and they provide secure, tamper-proof storage for private keys and X.509 security certificates. A smart card is a form of two-factor authentication that requires the user to have a smart card and know the PIN to gain access to network resources. Registry certificates cannot be used for two factor authentication. Although certificates are ideal candidates for two-factor authentication, registry certificates - which are protected by a strong private key and are the most appropriate certificates for two-factor authentication cannot be used. The reason for this is that Windows does not support registry certificates and completely ignores them. As a result, organizations must deploy and manage complex and expensive smart card solutions rather than using registry based certificates. <http://technet.microsoft.com/en-us/library/cc770519.aspx>
