(Choose two)A. Execute the tcpdump command on the virtual machine's tap interface.B. Ensure that there is a default route in each virtual network's VRF.C. Ensure that the SDN gateway has the VRF or VRFs created for the two virtual networks.D. Ensure that there is a Contrail policy between the two virtual networks.Answer: C,D

NEW QUESTION: 4How does a switch differ from a hub?A. A switch tracks MAC addresses of directly-connected devices.B. A switch does not induce any latency into the frame transfer time.C. A switch decreases the number of collision domains.D. A switch operates at a lower, more efficient layer of the OSI model.E. A switch decreases the number of broadcast domains.

Answer: AExplanation:Some of the features and functions of a switch include:A switch is essentially a fast, multi-port bridge, which can contain dozens of ports.Rather than creating two collision domains, each port creates its own collision domain.In a network of twenty nodes, twenty collision domains exist if each node is plugged into its own switch port.If an uplink port is included, one switch creates twenty-one single-node collision domains.A switch dynamically builds and maintains a Content-Addressable Memory (CAM) table, holding all of the necessary MAC information for each port.For a detailed description of how switches operate, and their key differences to hubs, see the reference link below.Reference: <http://www.cisco.com/warp/public/473/lan-switch-cisco.shtml>
