NEW QUESTION: 1The MOST important factor in ensuring the success of an information security program is effective:A. communication of information security requirements to all users in the organization.B. alignment with organizational goals and objectives.C. formulation of policies and procedures for information security.D. monitoring compliance with information security policies and procedures.Answer: BExplanation:ExplanationThe success of security programs is dependent upon alignment with organizational goals and objectives. Communication is a secondary step. Effective communication and education of users is a critical determinant of success but alignment with organizational goals and objectives is the most important factor for success.Mere formulation of policies without effective communication to users will not ensure success. Monitoring compliance with information security policies and procedures can be, at best, a detective mechanism that will not lead to success in the midst of uninformed users.
