NEW QUESTION: 2An application is using four VMAX3 devices. A TimeFinder SnapVX snapshot of the Storage Group containing these devices is created at 10 AM. The storage administrator adds another device to this Storage Group at 2 PM. A second snapshot of the Storage Group is created at 3 PM. A restore operation is performed at 4 PM using the 3 PM snapshot. What will be the status of the newly added device, after the restore operation? A. Not Ready B. Read/Write enabled C. Failed D. Write disabled Answer: B

NEW QUESTION: 3What is NOT true about a one-way hashing function? A. The results of a one-way hash is a message digest B. A hash cannot be reverse to get the message used to create the hash C. It provides authentication of the message D. It provides integrity of the message Answer: C Explanation: A one way hashing function can only be use for the integrity of a message and not for authentication or confidentiality. Because the hash creates just a fingerprint of the message which cannot be reversed and it is also very difficult to create a second message with the same hash. A hash by itself does not provide Authentication. It only provides a weak form or integrity. It would be possible for an attacker to perform a Man-In-The-Middle attack where both the hash and the digest could be changed without the receiver knowing it. A hash combined with your session key will produce a Message Authentication Code (MAC) which will provide you with both authentication of the source and integrity. It is sometimes referred to as a Keyed Hash. A hash encrypted with the sender private key produce a Digital Signature which provide authentication, but not the hash by itself. Hashing functions by themselves such as MD5, SHA1, SHA2, SHA-3 does not provide authentication. Source: HARRIS, Shon, All-In-One CISSP Certification Exam Guide, McGraw-Hill/Osborne, 2001, Page 548
