NEW QUESTION: 1 A customer's traffic is traversing your network, which consists of Junos devices. You must configure class of service for the traffic to meet a service-level agreement. In this scenario, which two statements are true? (Choose two.) A. By default, a packet's loss priority can be either low or high. B. By default, a packet's loss priority can be either low, medium-low, medium-high, or high. C. A packet's loss priority can be set using classifiers or rewrite markers. D. A packet's loss priority can be set using classifiers or policers. Answer: A,D
Explanation: A: Loss priority settings help to determine which packets are dropped from the network during periods of congestion. The software supports multiple packet loss priority (PLP) designations: low and high. (In addition, medium-low and medium-high PLPs are supported when you configure tricolor marking.) D: Packet loss priorities (PLPs) allow you to set the priority for dropping packets. You can use the PLP setting to identify packets that have experienced congestion. Typically, you mark packets exceeding some service level with a high loss priority—that is, a greater likelihood of being dropped. You set PLP by configuring a classifier or a policer. References:

53ジオロケーションルーティングポリシーを作成します。 Answer: B,C
Explanation: It is best to use the latency routing policy when you have resources in multiple Amazon EC2 data centers that perform the same function and you want Amazon Route 53 to respond to DNS queries with the resources that provide the best latency. You could also use the failover routing policy (for public hosted zones only) when you want to configure an active-passive failover, in which one resource takes all traffic when it's available and the other resource takes all traffic when the first resource isn't available.
