NEW QUESTION: 4A production worker in a plant often speaks for the entire work force when problems arise between labor and management. Although this individual has the same level of authority and expertise as the individual's co-workers, the worker seems to possess a degree of power that others do not have. What type of power does this individual apparently have?

A. Reward.

B. Legitimate.

C. Referent.

D. Coercive.

Answer: C

Explanation: Referent power is based on identification of subordinates with a superior. Thus, personal magnetism (charisma) may be a basis for influencing others to comply with a manager's directives.
