NEW QUESTION: 1Your commercial bank just released a television commercial to explain how easy it is to replace your debit card. They've want to launch the same video content used in TV on their Facebook to increase brand awareness.What are two recommendations you made your client before launching the video content on Facebook mobile-friendly environment? Choose ALL answers that apply.A. Add text to convey the message without soundB. Shortened the videoC. Only use Instagram placement for the video adD. Change the aspect ratio to square to increase visibility in the feed environmentE. Move the initial branding mention towards end of videoAnswer: A,B*Explanation:ExplanationTo make a video more effective for the mobile-feed environment you can:* Shortened the video* Change the aspect ratio to square to increase visibility in the feed environment* Add text to convey the message without sound* Move the initial brand mention earlierOther best video practices:* Capture attention quickly. Using colors, themes and imagery that evoke your brand at the start of your video can help people connect the ad to your brand quickly. Consider starting your video with lifestyle and product shots, recognizable spokespeople, action scenes or a vivid background to spark interest.* Design for sound off. Since most video ads in mobile feed are viewed without sound, it's important to convey your message visually. Showing captions, logos and products can help communicate your message, even in silence.* Frame your visual story. Producing video for a small screen requires consideration of dimension and scale. Play with zoom, crop and overall visual composition to make sure your story is told well on a small screen.* Play more. There's no universal solution to building brands or driving actions with mobile video, so keep experimenting, testing and iterating to learn what works for your brand and audience.
