A. Shared account management
B. Difficulty in auditing shared account
C. Password sharing
D. Accountability
Answer: D
Explanation: Explanation/Reference: The keyword PRIMARY is used in the question. Accountability should be the primary concern if critical servers can be accessed only by using shared user id and password. It would be very difficult to track the changes done by employee on critical server. For your exam you should know the information below:
Accountability Ultimately one of the drivers behind strong identification, authentication, auditing and session management is accountability. Accountability is fundamentally about being able to determine who or what is responsible for an action and can be held responsible. A closely related information assurance topic is non-repudiation. Repudiation is the ability to deny an action, event, impact or result. Non-repudiation is the process of ensuring a user may not deny an action. Accountability relies heavily on non-repudiation to ensure users, processes and actions may be held responsible for impacts. The following contribute to ensuring accountability of actions: Strong identification Strong authentication User training and awareness Comprehensive, timely and thorough monitoring Accurate and consistent audit logs Independent audits Policies enforcing accountability Organizational behavior supporting accountability The following answers are incorrect: The other options are also valid concern. But the primary concern should be accountability. Following reference(s) were/was used to create this question: CISA review manual 2014 Page number 328 and 329 Official ISC2 guide to CISSP
