NEW QUESTION: 1 Click the Exhibit button. You have a 2-node NetApp cluster. You perform a storage failover and notice that IP address 10.1.100.21 is unreachable while omegana1-01 is rebooting. After omegana1-01 is back online, the IP address becomes reachable again. However, IP address 10.1.100.20 was still reachable during the reboot. The commands shown in the exhibit were executed before the storage failover. In this scenario, why was IP address 10.1.100.21 unreachable? A. The failover group for 10.1.100.21 is misconfigured. B. The node management LIFs cannot fail over to other nodes. C. The Address Resolution Protocol (ARP) cache needs to be cleared on the upstream switch. D. The LIF for 10.1.100.21 has an incorrect failover setting. Answer: A
Explanation: The purpose and the default behavior of a LIF is indicated by the role associated with that LIF. Each LIF is assigned a default failover group and failover policy when you create the LIF. These settings automatically configure the LIF with a list of failover targets from the ports available in the failover group, so you need to understand the relationship between LIF roles and failover groups.
