NEW QUESTION: 3A customer has an Active Directory domain. The domain contains two servers that run Windows Server 2008 R2 Standard and 20 client computers that run Windows 7 Professional.The customer is currently in compliance with Microsoft licensing requirements. The customer purchases 20 new client computers that run Windows 7 Professional. The client computers will be used by new staff members to access RemoteApp programs on one of the servers. You need to recommend which Client Access Licenses (CALs) the customer must purchase for the planned deployment. The solution must minimize costs. What should you recommend? (Choose all that apply.)A. Twenty Remote Desktop Services Client Access Licenses (RDS CALs)B. Twenty Enterprise CALsC. Twenty Windows Server CALsD. Twenty Windows Virtual Desktop Access (Windows VDA) CALsAnswer: A*Explanation:Potentially missed in the flurry of announcements last fall was an announcement regarding Windows Server 2008 RDS CALs. These new Windows Server 2008 RDS CALs, required to access Remote Desktop Session Hosts running Windows Server 2008 R2, are the replacement for Terminal Server CALs used to access Terminal Server Sessions on previous Windows Server versions. The RDS CAL is also needed to use "Remote App" on a 2008 R2 Server. Note: There are two types of Remote Desktop Services client access licenses (RDS CALs): RDS Per Device CALs RDS Per User CALs When Per Device licensing mode is used, and a client computer or device connects to an RD Session Host server for the first time, the client computer or device is issued a temporary license by default. When a client computer or device connects to an RD Session Host server for the second time, if the license server is activated and enough RDS Per Device CALs are available, the license server issues the client computer or device a permanent, RDS Per Device CAL. An RDS Per User CAL gives one user the right to access an RD Session Host server from an unlimited number of client computers or devices. RDS Per User CALs are not enforced by RD Licensing. As a result, client connections can occur regardless of the number of RDS Per User CALs installed on the license server. This does not absolve administrators from Microsoft Software License Terms requirements to have a valid RDS Per User CAL for each user. Failure to have an RDS Per User CAL for each user, if Per User licensing mode is being used, is a violation of the license terms. Reference:Remote Desktop Services Client Access Licenses (RDS CALs)
