NEW QUESTION: 1Your network contains an Active Directory forest. The forest contains one domain and three sites. Each site contains two domain controllers. All domain controllers are DNS servers.You create a new Active Directory-integrated zone.You need to ensure that the new zone is replicated to the domain controllers in only one of the sites.What should you do first?A. Modify the replication settings of the default site link.B. Create an Active Directory application directory partition.C. Create an Active Directory connection object.D. Modify the NTDS Site Settings object for the site.Answer: BExplanation:Practically the same question as A/Q50 and K/Q17, different set of answers. To control which servers get a copy of the zone we have to store the zone in an application directory partition. That application directory partition must be created before we create the zone, otherwise it won't work. So that's what we have to do first. Directory partitions are also called naming contexts and we can create one using ntdsutil. Here I tried to create a zone with dnscmd /zoneadd. It failed because the directory partition I wanted to use did not exist yet. To fix that I used ntdsutil to create the directory partition dc=venomous,dc=contoso,dc=com. Note that after creating it a new naming context had been added. Then, after a minute or two, I tried to create the new zone again, and this time it worked.C:Documents and Settingsusernwz1Desktop1.PNGReference 1: <http://technet.microsoft.com/en-us/library/cc725739.aspx> Store Data in an AD DS Application Partition You can store Domain Name System (DNS) zones in the domain or application directory partitions of Active Directory Domain Services (AD DS). An application directory partition is a data structure in AD DS that distinguishes data for different replication purposes. When you store a DNS zone in an application directory partition, you can control the zone replication scope by controlling the replication scope of the application directory partition. Reference 2: <http://technet.microsoft.com/en-us/library/cc730970.aspx> Partition management Manages directory partitions for Active Directory Domain Services (AD DS) or Active Directory Lightweight Directory Services (AD LDS).This is a subcommand of Ntdsutil and Dsmgmt.
