A. CHAP
B. Social Engineering
C. Kerberos v5
D. Biometrics
Answer: D
Explanation: Biometrics is a method of authentication that uses physical characteristics, such as fingerprints, scars, retinal patterns, and other forms of biophysical qualities to identify a user. Nowadays, the usage of biometric devices such as hand scanners and retinal scanners is becoming more common in the business environment. Answer option D is incorrect. Kerberos v5 is an authentication method used by Windows operating systems to authenticate users and network services. Windows 2000/2003 and XP clients and servers use Kerberos v5 as the default authentication method. Kerberos has replaced the NT LAN Manager (NTLM) authentication method, which was less secure. Kerberos uses mutual authentication to verify both the identity of the user and network services. The Kerberos authentication process is transparent to the users. Note: Kerberos v5 is not supported on Windows XP Home clients or on any clients that are not members of an Active Directory domain. Answer option B is incorrect. Social engineering is the art of convincing people and making them disclose useful information such as account names and passwords. This information is further exploited by hackers to gain access to a user's computer or network. This method involves mental ability of the people to trick someone rather than their technical skills. A user should always distrust people who ask him for his account name or password, computer name, IP address, employee ID, or other information that can be misused. Answer option C is incorrect.
