NEW QUESTION: 1 A TCP/IP host is able to transmit small amounts of data (typically less than 1500 bytes), but attempts to transmit larger amounts of data hang and then time out. What is the cause of this problem?A. The processor of an intermediate router is averaging 90 percent utilization.B. A port on the switch that is connected to the TCP/IP host is duplicating traffic and sending it to a port that has a sniffer attached.C. There is a PMTUD failure in the network path.D. A link is flapping between two intermediate devices.Answer: C*Explanation: Explanation/Reference:Explanation: Sometimes, over some IP paths, a TCP/IP node can send small amounts of data (typically less than 1500 bytes) with no difficulty, but transmission attempts with larger amounts of data hang, then time out. Often this is observed as a unidirectional problem in that large data transfers succeed in one direction but fail in the other direction. This problem is likely caused by the TCP MSS value, PMTUD failure, different LAN media types, or defective links.Reference:

NEW QUESTION: 2 Which of the following components are used in the implementation of a wireless intrusion prevention system? Each correct answer represents a part of the solution. Choose three.A. AnalyzerB. ServerC. ConsoleD. SensorAnswer: B,C,D

NEW QUESTION: 3 A company has Windows 8.1 client computers. One computer named Computer1 will be used to centralize event logs from other client computers. You configure a Group Policy Object (GPO) that pushes event logs to Computer1. You need to configure Computer1 to receive the event logs. What should you do?A. Create a collector-initiated subscription.B. Create a source-computer-initiated subscription.C. Run the New-EventLogcmdlet.D. Run the Get-EventLogcmdlet.Answer: B*Explanation:

Setting up a Source Initiated SubscriptionSource-initiated subscriptions allow you to define a subscription on an event collector computer without defining the event source computers, and then multiple remote event source computers can be set up (using a group policy setting) to forward events to the event collector computer. This differs from a collector initiated subscription because in the collector initiated subscription model, the event collector must define all the event sources in the event subscription.Further Information:

<http://msdn.microsoft.com/en-us/library/windows/desktop/bb513652%28v=vs.85%29.aspx>
Creating a Collector Initiated SubscriptionYou can subscribe to receive events on a local computer (the event collector) that are forwarded from remote computers (the event sources) by using a collector-initiated subscription. In a collector-initiated subscription, the subscription must contain a list of all the event sources. Before a collector computer can subscribe to events and a remote event source can forward events, both computers must be configured for event collecting and forwarding.<http://technet.microsoft.com/en-us/library/hh849768.aspx>

New-EventLogThis cmdlet creates a new classic event log on a local or remote computer. It can also register an event source that writes to the new log or to an existing log.The cmdlets that contain the EventLog noun (the Event log cmdlets) work only on classic event logs. To get events from logs that use the Windows Event Log technology in Windows Vista and later versions of Windows, use Get-WinEvent.

<http://technet.microsoft.com/en-us/library/hh849834.aspx>Get-EventLogThe Get-EventLog cmdlet gets events and event logs on the local and remote computers.Use the parameters of Get-EventLog to search for events by using their property values.Get-EventLog gets only the events that match all of the specified property values.The cmdlets that contain the EventLog noun (the EventLog cmdlets) work only on classic event logs. To get events from logs that use the Windows Event Log technology in Windows Vista and later versions of Windows, use Get-WinEvent.
