NEW QUESTION: 1Your network contains 100 virtual desktops that are hosted on a Remote Desktop Services (RDS) collection. All RDS servers run Windows Server 2012. You need to recommend changes to the Remote Desktop environment to meet the following requirements: - Minimize the amount of bandwidth used by Remote Desktop sessions. - Minimize the amount of hardware resources used by the RDS servers. What should you recommend changing? More than one answer choice may achieve the goal. Select the BEST answer. A. The Configure compression for RemoteFx data Group Policy object (GPO) setting B. The screen resolution settings C. The Configure RemoteFx adaptive graphics Group Policy object (GPO) setting D. The Configure RemoteFx lossless graphics data Group Policy object (GPO) setting Answer: C Explanation: A group policy that limits screen resolution settings will save the most bandwidth / and memory. GPO (C) Configure RemoteFX lossless graphics data does not exist. GPO (D) Configuring the RDP compression will increase performance, but has a tradeoff - though there is a balanced setting, it will burn more memory, maybe even cpu cycles.

Virtual machine scale sets provide a way to deploy and manage large numbers of virtual machines, and can elastically scale in and out in response to load.
