NEW QUESTION: 1 Which three statements are true about the Cisco NAC Appliance solution? (Choose three.)
A. In a Layer 3 OOB ACL deployment of the Cisco NAC Appliance, the discovery host must be configured as the untrusted IP address of the Cisco NAC Appliance Server.
B. In a Layer 3 IB deployment of the Cisco NAC Appliance, the discovery host may be configured as the IP address of the Cisco NAC Appliance Manager.
C. In a Cisco NAC Appliance deployment, the discovery host must be configured on a Cisco router using the "NAC discovery-host" global configuration command.
D. In a VRF-style OOB deployment of the Cisco NAC Appliance, the discovery host may be the IP address that is on the trusted side of the Cisco NAC Appliance Server.
Answer: A,B,D
Explanation: The Discovery Host is the fully qualified domain name (FQDN) or untrusted interface IP address used by the Cisco NAC Agent to discover the Cisco NAC Server located multiple hops away on the network. The Agent initiates the discovery process by sending UDP packets to the known Discovery Host address. Discovery packets must reach the NAC Server untrusted interface to receive a response. In a Layer 3 OOB with VRF model, the Discovery Host is typically set to be the DNS name or IP address of the Cisco NAC Manager. The Manager exists in the clean network. Because all traffic from the "dirty" networks is routed by default through the Cisco NAC Server, the Discovery packets automatically flow through the Server. The traffic flow described here is one of the benefits to the VRF Method. This traffic flow provides for a consistent, predictable experience.
