NEW QUESTION: 2When modeling data in a JCR, what should the model make use of? (Choose the best answer.)A. ReferencesB. Same Name SiblingsC. IDsC. Human Readable nodesAnswer: C
Explanation:Explanation/Reference:Every node has an identifier. An identifier is a string whose format is not defined by this specification but which adheres to the following constraints:The identifier of a non-shared node is unique within a workspace. The identifier of a shared node is common to each member of that node's share-set (see § 3.9 Shareable Nodes Model).An identifier must be the most stable one available to the implementation. For example, in some implementations this might be nothing more than the node path itself. Other implementations might support node identifiers that are partly or entirely independent of the path.Incorrect Answers:A: two sibling properties can never have the same name.References: https://docs.adobe.com/docs/en/spec/jcr/2.0/3_Repository_Model.html

NEW QUESTION: 3The Platform for Privacy Preferences (P3P) was developed by the WorldWide Web Consortium (W3C) for what purpose?A. To monitor usersB. To evaluate a client's privacy practicesC. To implement public key cryptography for transactionsD. To implement privacy

practices on Web sites
Answer: D
Explanation:As of this writing, the latest W3C working draft of P3P is P3P 1.0, 28 January, 2002 (www.w3.org/TR). An excerpt of the W3C P3P Specification states P3P enables Web sites to express their privacy practices in a standard format that can be retrieved automatically and interpreted easily by user agents. P3P user agents will allow users to be informed of site practices (in both machine- and human-readable formats) and to automate decision-making based on these practices when appropriate. Thus users need not read the privacy policies at every site they visit. With P3, an organization can post its privacy policy in machine-readable form (XML) on its Web site. This policy statement includes:
Who has access to collected information
The type of information collected
How the information is used
The legal entity making the privacy statement
P3P also supports user agents that allow a user to configure a P3P-enabled Web browser with the user's privacy preferences. Then, when the user attempts to access a Web site, the user agent compares the user's stated preferences with the privacy policy in machine-readable form at the Web site. Access will be granted if the preferences match the policy. Otherwise, either access to the Web site will be blocked or a pop-up window will appear notifying the user that he/she must change their privacy preferences. Usually, this means that the user has to lower his/her privacy threshold. The other answers are distracters.
