NEW QUESTION: 3 Adam, a novice computer user, works primarily from home as a medical professional. He just bought a brand new Dual Core Pentium computer with over 3 GB of RAM. After about two months of working on his new computer, he notices that it is not running nearly as fast as it used to. Adam uses antivirus software, anti-spyware software, and keeps the computer up-to-date with Microsoft patches. After another month of working on the computer, Adam finds that his computer is even more noticeably slow. He also notices a window or two pop-up on his screen, but they quickly disappear. He has seen these windows show up, even when he has not been on the Internet. Adam notices that his computer only has about 10 GB of free space available. Since his hard drive is a 200 GB hard drive, Adam thinks this is very odd. Which of the following is the mostly likely the cause of the problem?
A. Computer is infected with the stealth kernel level rootkit.
B. Computer is infected with the Self-Replication Worm.
C. Computer is infected with the Stealth Trojan Virus.
D. Computer is infected with stealth virus.
Answer: A

NEW QUESTION: 4 Which of the following types of authentication tokens forms a logical connection to the client computer but does not require a physical connection?
A. Contactless token
B. Virtual token
C. Disconnected token
D. Connected token
Answer: A
Explanation: Contactless tokens are the third main type of physical tokens. Unlike connected tokens, they form a logical connection to the client computer but do not require a physical connection. The absence of the need for physical contact makes them more convenient than both connected and disconnected tokens. As a result, contactless tokens are a popular choice for keyless entry systems and electronic payment solutions such as Mobil Speedpass, which uses RFID to transmit authentication information from a keychain token. However, there have been various security concerns raised about RFID tokens after researchers at Johns Hopkins University and RSA Laboratories discovered that RFID tags could be easily cracked and cloned. Another downside is that contactless tokens have relatively short battery lives, usually only 3-5 years, which is low compared to USB tokens which may last up to 10 years. However, some tokens do allow the batteries to be changed, thus reducing costs.
Answer A is incorrect. Virtual tokens are a new concept in multi-factor authentication first introduced in 2005 by security company Sestus. Virtual tokens work by sharing the token generation process between the Internet website and the user's computer and have the advantage of not requiring the distribution of additional hardware or software. In addition, since the user's device is communicating directly with the authenticating website, the solution is resistant to man-in-the-middle attacks and similar forms of online fraud.
Answer B is incorrect. Connected tokens are tokens that must be physically connected to the client computer. Tokens in this category will automatically transmit the authentication information to the client computer once a physical connection is made, eliminating the need for the user to manually enter the authentication information. However, in order to use a connected token, the appropriate input device must be installed. The most common types of physical tokens are smart cards and USB tokens, which require a smart card reader and a USB port, respectively.
Answer C is incorrect. Disconnected tokens have neither a physical nor logical connection to the client computer. They typically do not require a special input device, and instead use a built-in screen to display the generated authentication data, which the user enters manually via a keyboard or keypad. Disconnected tokens are the most common type of security token used (usually in combination with a password) in two-factor authentication for online identification.
