NEW QUESTION: 1 Which two statements are true about resources defined by an administrator and registered with Oracle 12c Clusterware for high availability? A. A policy-managed resource can be started manually using `srvctl`. B. The action script is automatically set when using a policy-managed resource. C. An administrator-managed resource can be started manually using `srvctl`. D. Resource dependencies are automatically set when using a policy-managed resource. E. An administrator-managed resource can be started manually using `crsctl`. F. A policy-managed resource can be started manually using `crsctl`. Answer: C, F
Explanation/Reference: Explanation: A: With policy-based management, administrators specify the server pool (excluding the Generic and Free pools) in which the servers run. For example, a database administrator uses `SRVCTL` to create a server pool for servers hosting a database or database service. A clusterware administrator uses `CRSCTL` to create server pools for non-database use, such as creating a server pool for servers hosting an application. E: Administrator-managed resources refer to databases. You must use `SRVCTL` to create server pools that host Oracle databases. You must use `CRSCTL` to create server pools that host non-database resources such as middle tiers and applications.
