NEW QUESTION: 4 Refer to the Exhibit. An administrator manages a High Availability (HA)/Distributed Resource Scheduler (DRS)-enabled cluster and has configured the affinity rule shown in the Exhibit. Which two statements best describe the configuration shown in the exhibit? (Choose two.)A. DRS will not attempt to keep Marketing on the ESXi host 10.21.28.106.B. HA will not failover Marketing to ESXi hosts that are not in the Host Group.C. HA will failover Marketing to ESXi hosts that are not in the Host group.D. DRS will attempt to keep Marketing on the ESXi host 10.21.38.106.Answer: A,C Explanation: Explanation/Reference: Explanation: B & D As per exhibit Rule settings: VM-Host Affinity Rules A VM-Host affinity rule specifies whether or not the members of a selected virtual machine DRS group can run on the members of a specific host DRS group. Unlike a VM-VM affinity rule, which specifies affinity (or anti-affinity) between individual virtual machines, a VM-Host affinity rule specifies an affinity relationship between a group of virtual machines and a group of hosts. There are 'required' rules (designated by "must") and 'preferential' rules (designated by "should".) A VM-Host affinity rule includes the following components. One virtual machine DRS group. One host DRS group. A designation of whether the rule is a requirement ("must") or a preference ("should") and whether it is affinity ("run on") or anti-affinity ("not run on"). Because VM-Host affinity rules are cluster-based, the virtual machines and hosts that are included in a rule must all reside in the same cluster. If a virtual machine is removed from the cluster, it loses its DRS group affiliation, even if it is later returned to the cluster.
