NEW QUESTION: 1 Refer to the scenario. A large publicly-traded motion picture exhibitor that is a leader in digital and 3D cinema deployments operates 233 theaters and more than 2,200 screens in small to mid-sized communities in 35 states around the United States. They rely on MS Exchange Server 2010 for email. MS SQL Server 2010 for analyzing data about movies and theater-goers, and MS Excel 2010 for crunching numbers. The company runs nightly incremental backups and a full weekly backup that consists of close to 7 TB of data which takes up 72 hours to complete. The quarterly backups add an additional 7 TB of data. Tapes are inventoried and transported from the main data center to the disaster recovery site 150 miles away. The process of transporting tape cartridges to and from the Disaster Recovery site requires hours of daily work. The company currently relies on an aging robotic tape library and a process that takes the nightly backup tapes offsite every morning. Additionally, the company keeps an inventory, and if a restore is necessary they have to retrieve the tapes from the DR site and transport them to the main data center site. They have a 7 year data retention plan, and the tapes are expensive and not always reliable. Given the company's current system, if a full weekly backup fails over a weekend, the rerun could take up to 10 hours, even if just one job failed. The company has deployed a virtualized server infrastructure which runs VMware vSphere 5 on HP BladeSystem c7000 enclosures and BL460c servers interconnected with HP Virtual Connect Flex10 10Gb Ethernet Modules as well as several HP ProLiant DL380 servers. The company's top four IT improvements goals are as follows: -replacing the aging robotic tape library-enabling replication of backed up data from the main data center to the disaster recovery site (150 miles)-retaining more backup data in smaller disk space-increasing efficiency reliability, and ease of system administration. Moreover the company's top three business benefit goals are as follows: -increased confidence in disaster recovery-minimal disruption by backups during regular business hours-improved management of external audits. The company has asked that you create multiple solution proposals and prioritize one when you return for a presentation. Based on the discussions with the client, you determine that the current DR strategy is not optimal. You want to propose a new layout that utilizes three data facilities, as shown in the exhibit. How should you build the storage and backup based on this DR strategy?

A. Use an HP StoreOnce 4430 Backup solution to replicate the data between the three facilities. Use an additional HP StoreOnce 4430 array in the data bunker for long-term storage.
B. Use data replication between the three sites. Use an MSL library in the data bunker for archiving.
C. Use an HP StoreOnce 4430 Backup solution in each facility. Use an MSL library in the data bunker for archiving, and have a small MSL library in the other two sites for recovery.
D. Use data replication between the Main Data Center and the DR site. Use an HP StoreOnce 4430 Backup solution in the data bunker. Use an MSL library in the data bunker for archiving, and have a small MSL library in the other two sites for recovery.
Answer: D
