NEW QUESTION: 1 Company XYZ provides hosting services for hundreds of companies across multiple industries including healthcare, education, and manufacturing. The security architect for company XYZ is reviewing a vendor proposal to reduce company XYZ's hardware costs by combining multiple physical hosts through the use of virtualization technologies. The security architect notes concerns about data separation, confidentiality, regulatory requirements concerning PII, and administrative complexity on the proposal. Which of the following BEST describes the core concerns of the security architect?A. Not all of company XYZ's customers require the same level of security and the administrative complexity of maintaining multiple security postures on a single hypervisor negates hardware cost savings.B. Most of company XYZ's customers are willing to accept the risks of unauthorized disclosure and access to information by outside users.C. Company XYZ could be liable for disclosure of sensitive data from one hosted customer when accessed by a malicious user who has gained access to the virtual machine of another hosted customer.D. The availability requirements in SLAs with each hosted customer would have to be re-written to account for the transfer of virtual machines between physical platforms for regular maintenance.Answer: C*Explanation:The hosting company (Company XYZ) is responsible for the data separation of customer data. If a malicious user gained access to a customer's sensitive data, the customer could sue the hosting company for damages. The result of such a lawsuit could be catastrophic for the hosting company in terms of compensation paid to the customer and loss of revenue due to the damaged reputation of the hosting company.Incorrect Answers:A: It is very unlikely that most of company XYZ's customers are willing to accept the risks of unauthorized disclosure and access to information by outside users. It is far more likely that most of company XYZ's customers are NOT willing to accept the risks of unauthorized disclosure and access to information by outside users.B: It is not true that availability requirements in SLAs with each hosted customer would have to be rewritten to account for the transfer of virtual machines between physical platforms for regular maintenance. Virtual machines can be transferred between physical hosts without taking the virtual machine offline.D: Maintaining multiple security postures would not be necessary as long as all security requirements are met (or exceeded) by a single security posture. Even if multiple security postures were used, it is unlikely that maintain them would negate hardware cost savings.
