Select the Allow management operating system to share this network adapter check box for the virtual network.B. Create one external virtual network. Clear the Allow management operating system to share this network adapter check box for the virtual network.C. Create one internal virtual network. Clear the Enable virtual LAN identification for management operating system check box for the virtual network.D. Create one internal virtual network. Select the Enable virtual LAN identification for management operating system check box for the virtual network.Answer: B
Explanation:External virtual networks. Use this type when you want to provide virtual machines with access to a physical network to communicate with externally located servers and clients. This type of virtual network also allows virtual machines on the same virtualization server to communicate with each other. This type of network may also be available for use by the management operating system, depending on how you configure the networking. (The management operating system runs the Hyper-V role.) For more information, see "A closerlook at external virtual networks" later in this topic. Source:

NEW QUESTION: 3 Immune to the effects of electromagnetic interference (EMI) and therefore has a much longer effective usable length (up to two kilometers in some cases) is? A. Fiber Optic cable B. Axial cable C. Twisted Pair cable D. Coaxial cable Answer: A
Explanation: Since fiber optics does not use electrical signals to transmit the information (it uses lights that goes through the mirrored silvered cable from source to end), its not affected by EMI (Electro Magnetic Interference) like other copper transmission methods like 10base5 and 10base2, therefore EMI does not affect the possible transmission distance. Fiber optics can have a great distance between end points, much greater than the copper transmission methods. Examples of Fiber optics standards are: 100BaseFX and 1000BaseFX.

NEW QUESTION: 4 DRAG DROP Answer: Explanation: Step 1: Enable Resource Governor The Resource Governor is turned off by default. You can enable the Resource Governor by using either SQL Server Management Studio or Transact-SQL. Step 2: Create a resource pool. In the SQL Server Resource Governor, a resource pool represents a subset of the physical resources of an instance of the Database Engine. Step 3: Create a workload group In the SQL Server Resource Governor, a workload group serves as a container for session requests that have similar classification criteria. A workload allows for aggregate monitoring of the sessions, and defines policies for the sessions. Each workload group is in a resource pool, which represents a subset of the physical resources of an instance of the Database Engine. When a session is started, the Resource Governor classifier assigns the session to a specific workload group, and the session must run using the policies assigned to the workload group and the resources defined for the resource pool. Step 4: Write a classifier function. The SQL Server resource governor classification process assigns incoming sessions to a workload group based on the characteristics of the session. You can tailor the classification logic by writing a user-defined function, called a classifier function.
