Answer: B
Explanation: When creating an S3 bucket policy, the user needs to define the resource (which will have the bucket or the object), actions, effect and principal. They are explained below: Resources - Buckets and objects are the Amazon S3 resources for which user can allow or deny permissions. Actions - For each resource, Amazon S3 supports a set of operations. user identifies resource operations which will allow (or deny) by using action keywords Effect - What the effect will be when the user requests the specific action--this can be either allow or deny. Principal - The account or user who is allowed access to the actions and resources in the statement. You specify principal only in a bucket policy. It is the user, account, service, or other entity who is the recipient of this permission. In a user policy, the user to which the policy is attached is the implicit principal. Reference:
