NEW QUESTION: 2The Amazonian wilderness harbors the greatest number of species on this planet and is an irreplaceableresource for present and future generations. Amazonia is crucial for maintaining global climate andgenetic resources, and its forest and rivers provide vital sources of food, building materials,pharmaceuticals, and water needed by wildlife and humanity. The Los Amigos watershed in the state ofMadre de Dios, southeastern Peru, is representative of the pristine lowland moist forest once foundthroughout most of upper Amazonian South America. Threats to tropical forests occur in the form offishing, hunting, gold mining, timber extraction, impending road construction, and slash-and-burnagriculture. The Los Amigos watershed, consisting of 1.6 million hectares (3.95 million acres), still offersthe increasingly scarce opportunity to study rainforest as it was before the disruptive encroachment ofmodern human civilization. Because of its relatively pristine condition and the immediate need to justify itas a conservation zone, this area deserves intensive, long-term projects aimed at botanical training,ecotourism, biological inventory, and information synthesis. On July 24, 2001, the government of Peruand the Amazon Conservation Association signed a contractual agreement creating the first long-termpermanently renewable conservation concession. To our knowledge this is the first such agreement to beimplemented in the world. The conservation concession protects 340,000 acres of old-growth Amazonian forest in the Los Amigos watershed, which is located in southeastern Peru. This watershed protects theeastern flank of Manu National Park and is part of the lowland forest corridor that links it toBahuaja-Sonene National Park. The Los Amigos conservation concession will serve as a mechanism forthe development of a regional center of excellence in natural forest management and biodiversity science.Several major projects are being implemented at the Los Amigos Conservation Area. Louise Emmons isinitiating studies of mammal diversity and ecology in the Los Amigos area. Other projects involve studiesof the diversity of arthropods, amphibians, reptiles, and birds. Robin Foster has conducted botanicalstudies at Los Amigos, resulting in the labeling of hundreds of plant species along two kilometers of trail inupland and lowland forest. Michael Goulding is leading a fisheries and aquatic ecology program, whichaims to document the diversity of fish, their ecologies, and their habitats in the Los Amigos area and theMadre de Dios watershed in general. With support from the Amazon Conservation Association, and incollaboration with U.S. and Peruvian colleagues, the Botany of the Los Amigos project has been initiated. At Los Amigos, we are attempting to develop a system of preservation, sustainability, and scientific research; a marriage between various disciplines, from human ecology to economic botany, product marketing to forest management. The complexity of the ecosystem will best be understood through a multidisciplinary approach, and improved understanding of the complexity will lead to better management. The future of these forests will depend on sustainable management and development of alternative practices and products that do not require irreversible destruction. The botanical project will provide a foundation of information that is essential to other programs at Los Amigos. By combining botanical studies with fisheries and mammology, we will better understand plant/animal interactions. By providing names, the botanical program will facilitate accurate communication about plants and the animals that use them. Included in this scenario are humans, as we will dedicate time to people-plant interactions in order to learn what plants are used by people in the Los Amigos area, and what plants could potentially be used by people. To be informed, we must develop knowledge. To develop knowledge, we must collect, organize, and disseminate information. In this sense, botanical information has conservation value. Before we can use plant-based products from the forest, we must know what species are useful and we must know their names. We must be able to identify them, to know where they occur in the forest, how many of them exist, how they are pollinated and when they produce fruit (or other useful products). Aside from understanding the species as they occur locally at Los Amigos, we must have information about their overall distribution in tropical America in order to better understand and manage the distribution, variation, and viability of their genetic diversity. This involves a more complete understanding of the species through studies in the field and herbarium. The author's main purpose in the passage is to A. uphold the Peruvian government's progressive policies on management of the Los Amigos watershed as an example of government policy working toward conservation. B. position the Los Amigos watershed agreement as a success towards the achievement of the vital goal of conserving the Amazonian rainforests. C. demonstrate that conservation efforts have been historically successful and so should be continued. D. argue that the study of pristine rainforests is essential for documenting and studying the myriad new species that the forests contain. E. garner support for opposition to destructive activities in the Los Amigos watershed. Answer: B Explanation: This is a question that you should be asking yourself as you read through the passage. The passage begins by discussing the importance of conservation efforts in Amazonia and then links the work at the Los Amigos watershed with this goal. The correct answer will contain both of these things. A. is too general. B. isn't accurate--he doesn't focus on eliminating bad things but on continuing good things. C. sounds good. D. is incorrect because the passage is not primarily about the Peruvian government. E. points to one issue that the passage discusses but lacks many of the other issues the passage discusses. C. is the best answer.
